

MANUFACTURING LOSS EVENT: HURRICANE

PROJECT OVERVIEW

Hurricane Laura, a destructive tropical cyclone, critically impacted a major pipe and module fabrication firm in Louisiana. The property damage interfered with operations and the company's ability to produce for its clients and customers. While still recovering, Hurricane Delta made landfall about six weeks later and left even more destruction.

Cotton came in and constructed temporary walls and roofs over the facility's administration and executive buildings. For the critical fabrication shop, Cotton began by removing the existing trapezoidal metal system. Expert teams then installed the new roof, consisting of 22-gauge B-deck, two layers of polyisocyanurate (ISO) insulation and a mechanically fastened thermoplastic polyolefin (TPO) membrane.

Cotton completed the project on time and under budget, even while facing restrictive supply chain issues, a shortage of heavy equipment and the challenges of working in a disaster-stricken area. New roofs were successfully installed on three separate buildings, totaling over 450,000 square feet. The client was able to resume operations due to the innovation and expertise of Cotton Roofing.
